The great Christmas dinner disaster

It was the day before Christmas, everyone was preparing Christmas feasts, decorating firs, houses and parks, baking cookies for Santa Claus, or writing Wish lists. Kate examined her cat walking around the Christmas tree. Why was her cat so restless? Finally, they finished making the Christmas feast and decorating their house with lights. The Christmas tree was also beautifully shining, and her sister has finished the cookies for Santa. Their Christmas wishes were already written, and the kids were fast asleep.

“Santa brought the presents!“, Kate’s sister shouted through the house, dashing into Kate’s bedroom and pulling her off the bed. “Just let me sleep for one more second...”, Kate moaned, closing her eyelids again. “Come on!”, her sister shouted. So, Kate stood up reluctantly, pushing her blanket to the side. As they stood in the living room, Kate’s sister rushed to the table, starting to stuff herself full of cookies and pastries. Soon, everybody was sitting at the table. All at once the cat hopped onto the table shoving all the food off it! Suppressing tears, Kate reached out to the cat, that was destroying her work of hours and hours.

After a while, they were able to continue their celebration. Without a feast or a cat, who was locked outside the house.
